MCKEE FOODS AND THE OUTDOOR HAPPINESS MOVEMENT COMPLETE FOX RIVER STATE TRAIL
*Green Bay project revitalizes trail use with improved, energy-efficient lighting

Collegedale, TN; Green Bay, WI – Fox River State Trail is a popular spot in Green Bay for walking, jogging, biking, skating and horseback riding. The historic trail – used by Native Americans as a footpath, by early explorers as a trading route and then as a railway corridor – starts downtown along the Fox River and stretches for 25 miles, offering plenty of opportunities for outdoor happiness with scenic stops, recreational areas and a fitness challenge course.

To encourage trail use, McKee Foods partnered with the city’s Parks, Recreation & Forestry Department to replace the trail’s damaged and outdated lighting with energy-efficient LED lighting.

Referring to the restoration, Chris McKee, executive vice president of marketing and sales for McKee Foods, stated, “We’ve been working with people in various communities to identify needs and select where we can be of greatest value. The project in Green Bay is an example of that kind of collaboration and our commitment to the Outdoor Happiness cause.”

Brad Drefcinski, senior landscape architect with the city of Green Bay, expressed gratitude for the McKee Foods contribution and reported, “The new lighting has made quite a difference in the way the trail looks at night. Brighter, whiter lighting and better distribution of light provides a more pleasant, safer experience for Fox River Trail users.”

In addition, Drefcinski explained, the decision to install new lighting brought financial benefits. “By upgrading to more energy-efficient lighting, we qualified for an energy rebate, and we are putting that money toward buying additional lights needed to complete the trail lighting project.”
